THE CROSSROADS

Pastor's Corner . . .

There is lots of talk about "missional" churches in church circles today. Missional churches are basically those that take seriously the Command to "go, teach and serve". It is only one of the possibilities God may reveal to us in the months ahead.

Brad Brisco identified nine elements of a missional church in a 2010 article entitled "Transitioning From Traditional to Missional". Please take a few minutes to identify these excerpts then let me know what you think by leaving a note in my mailbox or sending a comment to pastorppc@bellsouth.net. Looking forward to hearing from you.

1. Start with Spiritual Formation - God calls the church to be a sent community of people who no longer live for themselves but instead live to participate with Him in His redemptive purposes... If the church is to "go and be," rather than "come and see," then we must make certain that we are a Spirit-formed community that has the spiritual capacity to impact the lives of others...

2. Cultivate a Missional Leadership Approach - The second most important transition in fostering a missional posture in a local congregation is rethinking church leadership models that have been accepted as the status quo... This missional leadership approach will involve creating an apostolic environment throughout the life of the church. .A culture of experimentation must be cultivated where attempting new initiatives is expected, even if they don't all succeed.

3. Emphasize the Priesthood of All Believers - Martin Luther's idea of the priesthood of all believers was that all Christians were called to carry out their vocational ministries in every area of life. Every believer must fully understand how their vocation plays a central part in God's redemptive Kingdom... God's purpose for His church would be better served if we encouraged people to recognize that "every member is a missionary." This missionary activity will include not just being sent to far away places, but to local work places, schools and neighborhoods.

4. Focus Attention on the Local Community - The church must begin to develop a theology of the city that sees the church as an agent of transformation for the good of the city (Jeremiah 29:7). This will involve exegeting each segment of the city to understand the local needs, identify with people, and discover unique opportunities for the church to share the good news of Jesus.

5. Don't Do It Alone - ...Missional churches must learn to create partnerships with other churches as well as already existing ministries that care about the community.

6. Create New Means of Measuring Success...we must create new scorecards to measure ministry effectiveness. ..For the missional church it is no longer about the number of people active in the church but instead the number of people active in the community. It is no longer about the amount of money received but it is about the amount of money given away.

7. Search for Third Places - ...more and more people are less and less interested in activities of the church, (therefore) it is increasingly important to connect with people in places of neutrality, or common "hang outs."... These places of common ground must take a position of greater importance in the overall ministry of the church as individuals begin to recognize themselves as missionaries sent into the local context to serve and share.

8. Tap into the Power of Stories - Stories create new possibilities and energize people to do things they had not previously imagined... Moreover, we can reflect deeply on biblical images of mission, service and hospitality by spending time on passages such as Genesis 12:2, Isaiah 61:1-3, Matthew 5:43; 10:40; 22:39; 25:35; and Luke 10:25-37.

9. Promote Patience - The greatest challenge facing the church in the West is the "re-conversion" of its own members. We need to be converted away from an internally-focused, Constantinean mode of church, and converted towards an externally-focused, missional-incarnational movement that is a true reflection of the missionary God we follow.

A Note from Pastor Wilson

Thank you for Sunday's service and meal. Your Core Values of Radical Hospitality and Passionate Worship were evident. That is a very good thing.

Some loved ones were understandably concerned about the call to PPC but that's no longer the case for those who came yesterday. Several commented on the beauty of the church "campus" as well as the warm welcome they received from ushers and members alike. They felt the Spirit, heard the Word proclaimed in many ways, enjoyed the music and saw that God is at the center of our partnership.

The presence of the Spirit was also felt during the luncheon. My family and friends loved the decorations in the Fellowship Hall and the good food, especially the scrumptious desserts (that we didn't need but sampled anyway). They were also impressed by the sincerity of those who went out of their way to make them feel comfortable.

Good news travels fast so you can expect to see other visitors in the days and weeks ahead. Thank you for trusting the Spirit and my leadership.

Peace and blessings,

Pastor Wilson
